M'ADOO MAKES FIERY ATTACK ON SMITH

Says Local Politicians Are Hired by Gas Interests

OHIO COUNSEL MAKES ATTACK ON FUEL FIRM

Special Attorney Claims Campaign of Misrepresentation Being Made.

COLUMBUS, O., Feb. 2 — (IN S)—Accusation that the Logan Gas company "is attempting to hire local politicians in various communities, under the guise that they are to act as attorneys for the company, but with the ostensible purpose of having these politicians carry on a campaign of misrepresentation, in order to sway the local councilmanic bodies into accepting contracts which will be unfair to the consumers," was voiced here today by Attorney Grant E. Mouser Jr., Marion, special counsel in the office of Attorney General Edward C. Turner.

Mouser is aiding counsel for various Ohio municipalities and rural districts which are protesting against the application of the Logan Gas company, now pending before the state utilities commission, for approval of a schedule of increased rates for natural gas service.

Small Difference
"It is true that I stated at the last hearing (before the utilities commission) that the gas company and the cities were only five cents apart (in negotiations for a settlement).

If the Logan Gas company is still in the frame of mind to make one of three offers of settlement that they made to me during the last three weeks in behalf of Marion and other cities, they will admit that this is true," continued Mouser, commenting upon a recent address at Marion by E. M. Tharp, representing the gas company.

Tharp was credited with having read excerpts from the commission's record of the last hearing in which Mouser made this statement.

"This five-cent difference, however, is most vital since it means five cents per each 1,000 cubic feet to each consumer," said Mouser. And this means thousands of dollars to the Logan Gas company and its consumers," upon the statement, credited to Tharp, that the utilities commission does not want to settle the Logan Gas rate controversy, especially in view of the fact that 38 of the municipalities involved when the controversy started have settled with the company, thus leaving only four of five "still fighting," Mouser said.

Paying Higher Rate

FLAT RATE BASIS FOR WATER DENIED

Denying that a contract was ever entered into with the tenants of the Odd Fellows building to supply them with water, on a flat rate basis, Harry Denman, manager of the Peoples' Utilities Ohio Corporation, Friday, declared that his company had the right to put meters in at any time it was so desired by them.

Mr. Denman declared tenants of the Odd Fellows building were using much more water than was being paid for.

SAN JUAN IS PREPARING TO GREET LINDY

Porto Rican City to Be Goal of Today's Flight of Aviator From St. Thomas.

ST. THOMAS, VIRGIN ISLANDS, Feb. 2—(INS) — Col. Charles A. Lindbergh hopped off from Lindbergh field at 11:50 o'clock this morning for San Juan, Porto Rico. On his way he planned to fly over San Croix.

SAN JUAN, PORTO RICO, Feb. 2—(INS)—With the day officially proclaimed "Lindbergh Day," and the awaited visitor already officially christened "the son of Porto Rico," San Juan was in festive mood today preparing to welcome Col. Charles A. Lindbergh.

The aviator, flying from St. Thomas, was due here this afternoon at 3 o'clock, at Escambron field.

American flags and bunting decorated every available space, colored electric lights were strung from all convenient poles, and thousands of persons thronged the city watching to sight the Spirit of St. Louis, soaring above the field.

Two escort planes were ready to fly to meet the visitor and guide him, if necessary, to the field where he will be met by Governor Towner and the official reception committee and escorted to the government house.

Functions planned for today in honor of Col. Lindbergh included a Rotary luncheon at the Condado Vanderbilt, a grand parade of civil and military units, and a dinner and ball at the municipal theatre.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2 (UP)—Lieut. George H. Towner and two U. S. marine companions hopped off from Anacostia naval air station at 6:25 a. m. today on a one-stop flight to Nicaragua in a large Fokker transport plane.

COUNCIL WILL CONSIDER CAR ISSUE FRIDAY

Civic Body Postpones Action on Traction Franchise Until Special Meeting.

No action was taken on the proposal of the Scioto Valley traction company for a new franchise at a brief meeting of the city council Wednesday night. The franchise will be the subject of a special closed meeting of council Friday night.

All the councilmen were present and heard Mayor B. T. Hedges first monthly report on fines, fees and licenses collected. These totaled $105.50 for January.

Paul Adkins, city solicitor, recommended that the Chesapeake and Hocking Railroad company be required to continue its indemnity bond, which was posted when the company first began its construction of the new railroad.

Adkins also informed council that the state may assume a portion of the cost of paving South Court street from the Norfolk and Western railroad tracks to the city limit. If it is decided to make the paving 57 feet wide to conform with the other paved portions of the street, the state probably will pay for a third of it, Adkins said. Final decision in the proposal will be made by the state director of highways.

Council members expressed a desire to learn how much money will be available this year for sewer construction and street paving and referred to the finance committee the task of ascertaining the amount of bonds that can be issued.

Service Director Miller was authorized to provide more lights for the council chamber.

A request was received from Postmaster George Foreman asking that new street signs be erected to comply with the requirements of the federal postoffice department.

Double Triumph Scored by U. S. Army Band in Two Concerts Here

Greatness and Ability of Military Musical Organization Demonstrated in Performance at Memorial Hall—High School Leader Honored.

A double triumph was scored by the United States Army band and its leader, Captain W. J. Stannard, Wednesday, at the Memorial Hall, in its two concerts, in the afternoon and evening under the auspices of Howard Hall Post No. 134, American Legion. The performances were unquestionable successes in every respect and the band and audience were en rapport from the beginning to the end of each performance. The audiences were moved to hearty enthusiasm at each number, and the band was equally generous in recognizing and evincing its appreciation by playing many extra selections.

The greatness of this band was demonstrated Wednesday beyond contradiction by the most captious critic. It proved its right to be called the United States Army band, by its performances that were of the most exacting character, and by a manner that displayed all the essentials of band artistry, precision in attack and release, unanimity in performance, instantaneity of response to the baton and its conductor.

A precision of delivery gave remarkable testimony of the ability of Captain Stannard as a leader, and to the ability of the bandmen, joined with excellence of technique, was a richness, mellowness and purity of intonation possessed by very, very few wind bands.

Zanglein Takes Baton
At the afternoon concert, the members of the high school orchestra were honored by being conducted by Captain Stannard, and then in courtesy to Mr. Zanglein, the high school director, he was asked to lead the Army band, which he did with success.

Of the first two numbers in the evening, "Overture to the Opera Rienzi," and "In a Chinese Temple Garden," the latter was the more popular, and it was a lovely number. Also, Mr. Darcy's trumpet solo brought much applause, as did his encore, "By the Waters of the Minnetonka," by Leaurance. The band accompaniment to this was splendid. Mr. Darcy, who is the second leader, then played, "Believe Me If All Those Endearing Young Charms," as a solo encore.

The kettle drums in "Fandina" were the outstanding feature of that composition by Sibelius. Captain Stannard himself, composed "The Washington Evening Star," which was played just before the intermission.

The saxophone soloist, Eugene Hostetter brought forth much applause, for which the audience was rewarded with two encores, Cadman's "At Dawning," and "Love Sends a Little Gift of Roses."

Columbus Men Play
The next two numbers were of Pan-American origin, said to have come originally from the Incas. The latter "Jarde Tapatio," being played on several occasions for Col.

Charles Lindbergh. Then in contrast, they played a United States tune of the middle west, "Illinois," by Woods. As a special favor, an encore "My Blue Heaven," by Donaldson, was used, in which the principal instruments were played by men from the Columbus, O. barracks. This was under the direction of Mr. Darcy. Each of these men was personally introduced by the leader. "On the Mall," by Goldman, another encore with vocal and whistling choruses, was well liked.

The xylophone soloist, John Baumann, could have played many more encores than he did, for everyone enjoyed that particular instrument.

Of course, no one can play "The Star Spangled Banner," as can a military band, and this, the last number on the program, was superb.

ROTARY CLUB HEARS MUSIC AND HISTORY

U. S. Army Band Members and Indiana Author Entertain Civic Group.

Two entertainments featured the noonday meeting of the Rotary club in the Boggs hotel Wednesday, officers of the U. S. Army band giving musical numbers and talks, while Ross Lockridge, historian, very entertainingly gave a description of the taking of Fort Vincennes in Indiana by George Rogers Clark who saved the middle-west states from the British and Indians 149 years ago, the turning point of the Revolutionary War.

Mr. Lockridge said the 150th anniversary of this battle would be observed on Feb. 25, 1929, and urged that Ohioans help along with Indiana in commemorating this great event.

The speaker, who has a vast storehouse of knowledge pertaining to the early history of the country and who is a follower of George Rogers Clark, early pioneer, vividly described the battle and how Clark's men, exhausted after days of marching through snow and cold, stood their last ground until the English general had surrendered unconditionally.

Mr. Lockridge and Professor J. G. Collicott, superintendent of the Columbus schools, who introduced the speaker, were here spending the day visiting the Logan Elm. Captain Stannard and members of his band gave several solos and talks which were well received.

Talk About Tough Luck!—Groundhog Sees His Shadow

Well,—he saw it! And that means six more weeks of cold weather.

And who believes in groundhogs anyway?

And, why bring that up? Anyway, according to tradition and legend and all of that if Mr. Groundhog ventures forth on Feb. 2 and sees his shadow he will immediately crawl back into his hole and stay there through the next six weeks of cold weather which are certain to come.

And he certainly saw his shadow in Circleville Thursday. The Old Sol crept out of his sky bed at an early hour in the morning and helped Mr. Groundhog display his ungainly form.

And so we're ordering an extra suit of old-fashioned flannels and are getting ready for the six weeks' cold spell, but remember, dear people, groundhogs do not always tell the truth and we're just as likely to be planting a garden in a few weeks as not.

PARTY WARNED TO BEWARE OF WET INTERESTS

Ex-Secretary of Treasury Says Only "Dry" Candidate Can Unite Democrats.

By GEORGE R. HOLMES
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent
Washington, Feb. 2—William G. McAdoo may be out of the reckoning for the 1928 Democratic nomination, but he is still on the firing line against Gov. Al Smith.

The "Houston-and-Harmony" advocates awoke to this realization with a shock today as they perused the militant speech of the former treasury head in Richmond last night — a speech in which he mentioned Gov. Smith by name and declared that the things Smith stands for "must be fought to a conclusion next year."

Most Democrats in Washington interpreted McAdoo's speech as a rallying call to the anti-Smith elements of the party. It came as a surprise to most of the leaders, for since McAdoo's Pacific speech at the Jackson Day dinner they have been led to believe that he would not seek to re-ignite the embers of Madison Square Garden.

Says Wets Active
Nobody but an uncompromising dry can be put into the White House next year with safety to the Eighteenth Amendment, McAdoo warned. The "liquor interests," he asserted, have gained political control of both New York and Maryland, the two states that have no state enforcement statutes. And to expect enforcement from a president who does not believe in the law, he said, "is absurd on the face of it."

"Attempt is being made," said McAdoo, "to convince the country that a matter if a wet is elected president the constitution and the laws will be enforced. That is both unsound and untrue. The White House in the hands of the liquor interests would be a veritable Gibraltar of offensive operations and the doom of the Eighteenth Amendment would be written boldly on the face of the Constitution."

"It is of outstanding importance," he continued, "to impress the fact that the powers of government must be entrusted only to those who have the honest will to enforce the law. It is not to be expected that the law will be enforced by officials who are hostile to it and who are willing to remit the performance of their public duties in exchange for political or personal advantage."

Applies to Reed
McAdoo's speech inferentially applied not only to Gov. Smith and Gov. Ritchie, but to Senator James A. Reed of Missouri, as well, for the Missourian is not noted for his fondness for the prohibitory statutes. Smith, Ritchie and Reed admittedly are the outstanding candidates for the nomination at this stage of the game. The plain inference of the former cabinet officer, therefore, is that this trio "must be fought to a conclusion" at Houston.

Concerning his own political future, if any, McAdoo had nothing to say. He has steadfastly refused to add to the statement he made some months ago that he would "stand aside" in 1928.

OHIO COUNSEL MAKES ATTACK ON FUEL FIRM

Special Attorney Claims Campaign of Misrepresentation Being Made.

COLUMBUS, O., Feb. 2 — (IN S) — Accusation that the Logan Gas company "is attempting to hire local politicians in various communities, under the guise that they are to act as attorneys for the company, but with the ostensible purpose of having these politicians carry on a campaign of misrepresentation, in order to sway the local councilmanic bodies into accepting contracts which will be unfair to the consumers," was voiced here today by Attorney Grant E. COUNCIL WILL CONSIDER CAR ISSUE FRIDAY

Civic Body Postpones Action on Traction Franchise Until Special Meeting.

No action was taken on the proposal of the Scioto Valley traction company for a new franchise at a brief meeting of the city council Wednesday night. The franchise will be the subject of a special closed meeting of council Friday night.

All the councilmen were present and heard Mayor B. T. Hedges first monthly report on fines, fees and licenses collected. These totaled $105.50 for January.

Paul Adkins, city solicitor, recommended that the Cheasapeake and Hocking Railroad company be required to continue its indemnity bond, which was posted when the company first began its construction of the new railroad.

Adkins also informed council that the state may assume a portion of the cost of paving South Court street from the Norfolk and Western railroad tracks to the city limit. If it is decided to make the paving 57 feet wide to conform with the other paved portions of the street, the state probably will pay for a third of it, Adkins said. Final decision in the proposal will be made by the state director of highways.

Council members expressed a desire to learn how much money will be available this year for sewer construction and street paving and referred to the finance committee the task of ascertaining the amount of bonds that can be issued.

Service Director Miller was authorized to provide more lights for the council chamber.

A request was received from Postmaster George Foresman asking that new street signs be erected to comply with the requirements of the federal postoffice department.

Double Triumph Scored by U. S. Army Band in Two Concerts Here

Greatness and Ability of Military Musical Organization Demonstrated in Performance at Memorial Hall—High School Leader Honored.

A double triumph was scored by the United States Army band and its leader, Captain W. J. Mr. Darcy, who is the second leader, then played, "Believe Me If All Those Endearing Young Charms," as a solo encore.

The kettle drums in "Finlandia" were the outstanding feature of that composition by Sibelius. Captain Stannard himself, composed "The Washington Evening Star," which was played just before the intermission.

The saxophone soloist, Eugene Hostetter brought forth much applause, for which the audience was rewarded with two encores, Cadman's "At Dawning," and "Love Sends a Little Gift of Roses."

ROTARY CLUB HEARS MUSIC AND HISTORY

U. S. Army Band Members and Indiana Author Entertain Civic Group.

Two entertainments featured the noonday meeting of the Rotary club in the Boggs hotel Wednesday, officers of the U. S. Army band giving musical numbers and talks, while Ross Lockridge, historian, very entertainingly gave a description of the taking of Fort Vincennes in Indiana by George Rogers Clark who saved the middle-west states from the British and Indians 149 years ago, the turning point of the Revolutionary War.

Mr. Lockridge said the 150th anniversary of this battle would be observed on Feb. 25, 1929, and urged that Ohioans help along with Indiana in commemorating this great event.

The speaker, who has a vast storehouse of knowledge pertaining to the early history of the country and who is a follower of George Rogers Clark, early pioneer, vividly described the battle and how Clark's men, exhausted after days of marching through snow and cold, stood their last ground until the English general had surrendered unconditionally.

Mr. Lockridge and Professor J. G. Collicott, superintendent of the Columbus schools, who introduced the speaker, were here spending the day visiting the Logan Elm.

Captain Stannard and members of his band gave several solos and talks which were well received.

Talk About Tough Luck!—Groundhog Sees His Shadow

Well,—he saw it!

And that means six more weeks of cold weather.

And who believes in groundhogs anyway?

And, why bring that up? Anyway, according to tradition and legend and all of that if Mr. Groundhog ventures forth on Feb. 2 and sees his shadow he will immediately crawl back into his hole and stay there through the next six weeks of cold weather which are certain to come.

And he certainly saw his shadow in Circleville Thursday. The Old Sol crept out of his sky bed at an early hour in the morning and helped Mr. Groundhog display his ungainly form.

And so we're ordering an extra suit of old-fashioned flannels and are getting ready for the six weeks' cold spell, but remember, dear people, groundhogs do not always tell the truth and we're just as likely to be planting a garden in a few weeks as not.

PARTY WARNED TO BEWARE OF WET INTERESTS

Ex-Secretary of Treasury Says Only "Dry" Candidate Can Unite Democrats.

By GEORGE R. HOLMES
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent
Washington, Feb. 2 — William G. McAdoo may be out of the reckoning for the 1928 Democratic nomination, but he is still on the firing line against Gov. Al Smith.

The "Houston-and-Harmony" advocates awoke to this realization with a shock today as they perused the militant speech of the former treasury head in Richmond last night — a speech in which he mentioned Gov. Smith by name and declared that the things Smith stands for "must be fought to a conclusion next year."

Most Democrats in Washington interpreted McAdoo's speech as a rallying call to the anti-Smith elements of the party. It came as a surprise to most of the leaders, for since McAdoo's Pacific speech at the Jackson Day dinner they have been led to believe that he would not seek to re-kind the embers of Madison Square Garden.

Says Wets Active
Nobody but an uncompromising dry can be put into the White House next year with safety to the Eighteenth Amendment, McAdoo warned. The "liquor interests," he asserted, have gained political control of both New York and Maryland, the two states that have no state enforcement statutes. And to expect enforcement from a president who does not believe in the law, he said, "is absurd on the face of it."

"Attempt is being made," said McAdoo, "to convince the country that a matter if a wet is elected president the constitution and the laws will be enforced. That is both unsound and untrue. The White House in the hands of the liquor interests would be a veritable Gibraltar of offensive operations and the doom of the Eighteenth Amendment would be written boldly on the face of the Constitution."

"It is of outstanding importance," he continued, "to impress the fact that the powers of government must be entrusted only to those who have the honest will to enforce the law. It is not to be expected that the law will be enforced by officials who are hostile to it and who are willing to remit the performance of their public duties in exchange for political or personal advance."

Applies to Reed
McAdoo's speech inferentially applied not only to Gov. Smith and Gov. Ritchie, but to Senator James A. Reed of Missouri, as well, for the Missourian is not noted for his fondness for the prohibitory statutes. Smith, Ritchie and Reed admittedly are the outstanding candidates for the nomination at this stage of the game. The plain inference of the former cabinet officer, therefore, is that this trio "must be fought to a conclusion" at Houston.

Concerning his own political future, if any, McAdoo had nothing to say. He has steadfastly refused to add to the statement he made some months ago that he would "stand aside" in 1928.

Paris Style Hints

By ALICE LANGELEIR

PARIS, Feb. 2—(INS)—Smoking suits are being worn by many smart women these days for a quiet tea or dinner without guests.

They look most attractive on a slim figure and usually consist of loose Turkish trousers and a long coat of gorgeous embroidered fabric. One very chic Parisienne had adopted red Turkish trousers of velvet, very effective under a three-quarter coat of gorgeous red, blue and gold lame, bordered with gold braid or fur dyed to match. Another wears black satin trousers with a bright orange coat. Many interesting color schemes can be found. They all have an Eastern touch of opulence which makes them a little unsafe for the average Western woman.

Shetland chiffon, crepe and lace are all combined to make charming boudoir wraps which are as often as not worn outside of the chamber these days. New designs include the long coat with the tunic effect. One in palest pink satin-cire is bordered with line of silver braid. The coat looks very stunning over an underdress of pink chiffon and cream lace with silver threads faintly outlining the pattern of the lace. The collar is faced with white coney. The same model is very attractive in velvet, brocade or some of the fancy zennas.

A tea-gown in ring velvet has the cape part lined with grey chiffon on which is laid the tiniest edging of cream lace. The long waistline is emphasized by a girdle of silk and silver weighted by pearl tassels. Tiny pearl tassels also finish the tie of velvet.

Cashmere-backed satin in palest shades is much used for the boudoir wrap. One in bright mauve is lined with the very softest mauve taffeta and bordered with a mauve fur dyed to match.

PELTZER, FEARING DEFEAT, MAY NOT COMPETE

GERMAN STAR WANTS TO GET INTO TRAINING

Many Track Aces Are Entered in Millrose Games at New York Thursday Night

NEW YORK, Feb. 2 — (INS) — Despite the fact that the foreign relations committee of the amateur athletic union has granted him sanction to run in the Millrose games here tonight, Dr. Otto Peltzer may not compete because he fears defeat.

The A. A. U. ruled that the star German runner must compete in the half-mile invitation race to-night against such stars as Pinkie Sober, Phil Edwards and Bernard McCafferty, and stated that his wish to run in a special 800-meter event against lesser lights would not be granted. Peltzer wants to race against America's best runners eventually but at present he feels he is not in condition due to his constant traveling and lack of training in the past two months. Furthermore, the board track at Madison Square Garden is not the doctor's liking.

Decision Today
Peltzer was to make a decision today at a conference with Millrose officials. If it can be avoided he does not wish to disappoint the 15,000 track enthusiasts who are clamoring to see him in action.

The A. A. U. ruled that Peltzer also may compete in the Illinois A. C. games in Chicago on Feb. 10, and in a third meet to be determined later. Peltzer also has cabled to the ruling German athletic body for permission to run in the New York A. C. games here on Feb. 20, the National A. A. U. championships here on Feb. 25, in a meet in Los Angeles about March 6; and in the Knights of Columbus games here on Feb. 29. At present his appearance in these meets is barred by an edict of the Deutsche Sportbehörde, sent to the A. A. U. here yesterday, limiting Peltzer to three races here within fourteen days.

Stars To Compete
Track stars from all parts of the United States and leading athletes from Canada and Germany will compete in the Millrose games tonight.

Lloyd Hahn, unbeaten for two years, will oppose Ray Conger, of the Illinois A. C., National A. A. U. champion and Bill Cox of Penn state, intercollegiate champion, in the Rodman Wanamaker mile.

Karl Wildermuth of Georgetown, national indoor champion; Fred Alderman, of the Illinois A. C., and Truck Miller, of the Boston A. A., are headliners in the sprints.

A picked Canadian girls' team will race an American quartet in a 440-yard relay race. Arthur Schwab and William Schnitt of Berlin will attempt to outstep Harry Hinkel, America's champion Walker, in the 5,000-meter walk.

SPORTSMATTER—

The east's first important indoor meet of the season takes place tonight in Madison Square Garden, where a galaxy of track and field stars will compete in the annual games of the Millrose A. A.

While tradition decrees that the high spot of the evening shall be the running of the historic "Millrose 600," the fact that this is an Olympic year has stimulated interest and competition in a number of other events.

Most of these youngsters who will be competing tonight are ambitious to go to Amsterdam. They are starting now to lay the foundation for their claims to recognition by the selection committee of the American Olympic Association.

Take the case of the sprinters. One or two races do not necessarily stamp one performer as better than another, if they are reasonably close. So many minute things count in a short dash of 60, 70, or even 100 yards.

The United States will send to Amsterdam a squad of sprinters including the fastest now running in any country. But what those who select the team are most interested in is consistency. They want sprinters who can be counted upon to get away fast and keep going when that starting pistol lets go at Amsterdam on July 29.

An "in-and-out," even if he has slipped up to the tape ahead of a more consistent rival on one or two occasions, might not prove as valuable as the man he managed to beat once or twice, provided both were capable of winging the century in something like 9 7-10 seconds.

One of the features of tonight's meet will be a sprint series at 40, 50 and 60 yards.

The 40-yard dash will be run first and then the 60, with the two fastest men in each of these events qualifying for the 50-yard dash in lieu of a final heat.

Karl Wildermuth, Georgetown star, whose sprinting has been the most consistent of the present season, probably will start. Chet Bowman of the Newark A. C., who was timed in 9 3-5 seconds while winning the national A. A. U. 100-yard championship at Lincoln last year, is another starter.

Others are Al Miller, the 200 pounder, formerly of Harvard; Alf Leconey of the Meadowbrook Club, and Alderman, former Michigan State star.

Another sprinter little known in the east, who will be making his debut tonight is Robert Greenwade of the New Mexico State Teachers College.

Greenwade has challenged Charley Paddock and everyone else to a 300-yard sprint around the Garden track.

"I have run against European sprinters in Sweden, Finland and Germany," writes Greenwade, who toured Europe in 1926 with Johnny Kiel, the weight tosser of the Kansas A. C. "These men had beaten Paddock and I beat some of them myself at Stockholm and Helsingfors."

The former Kansan has been clocked in 31 1-5 for the 300, and 48 seconds for the quarter.

PLENTY OF ACTION SEEN IN MATCHES

Mat fans will see plenty of action on the wrestling matches at the C. A. C. next Monday evening.

The boys are all well matched and are ready to start. The main event especially should be good, as Beightler has been a consistent winner lately. He has wrestled with some of the topnotchers in the light-heavy division, and has held his own with all of them.

Pictures of the contestants are on display in the window of Littleton's tailor shop on East Main street, and these pictures show that all the boys belong to the "Cauliflower Crop" and are not a bunch of amateurs as is the general belief.

These boys have wrestled all over the country and are rated quite highly.

HUGGINS SEEKING NEW FIRST SACKER

NEW YORK, Feb. 2—(INS) — While he says he intends to stand pat on the line-up of his champion New York Yankees, Manager Miller Huggins coyly announces that he would like to obtain a hard-hitting first baseman as an understudy for Eusebio Lou Gehrig.

Negotiations for George Burns, first sacker of the Cleveland Indians, apparently have failed.

Huggins said the veteran Joe Dugan would start the season at third base unless Gene Rozertson or one of the other Rookie infielders showed unusual ability at the hot corner.

Ed Barrow, secretary of the club announced that approximately twenty-five Yankees have signed contracts for 1928.

LANCASTER PLAYS C. A. C. FIVE HERE

Tonight, Circleville basketball fans will see the renewal of the old rivalry which exists between the Athletic teams of Lancaster and Circleville. The C. A. C. team will endeavor to get revenge for a defeat by Lancaster earlier in the season. Lancaster, however, is going to be the hardest team to beat, the club has faced this season.

But it will be a great game, regardless of the outcome. At these Lancaster games there is always much enthusiastic cheering and with a splendid referee, this promises to be an exciting evening.

HIS MILLION DOLLAR EYES GONE?

Rumors from the coast have it that Jack Dempsey's eyes are going back on him and that his physicians have ordered him to give up the ring. Dempsey's camp, however, denies the reports. Successful Celtic Basketballers Star As Team, Not Individually

By DAVIS J. WALSH
I. N. S. Sports Editor

NEW YORK, Feb. 2—(INS) — Probably as successful an organization of its kind, or any other, known to man today is a basketball team called the Celtics, of New York, at present engaged in the formality of cake-walking to the American Basketball League pennant and the national championship. This, of course, is not a disavowal of mine; it has been pretty well understood these seven years that the Celtics stand alone in their particular line. In fact, the claim has been advanced, and never effectively denied, that they represent the best basketball team ever assembled.

That being the case, it might be surmised that the five men involved individually are the greatest in the world. I have it from Garry Schneek, once a star in his own right but now a magnate and proportionately obese, that there are not. The Celtics are great, he says, but only as a unit. Mr. Schneek should know. He is one of the owners of the outfit.

Others Look Strong

My own estimate of the situation is that at least several other American League clubs look almost as strong, or entirely so, on paper. But the league insists on paying off according to the number of baskets scored and, judged on this system, the Celtics are unbeatable over a route. They have lost single games in plenty, a matter of 70 of them since 1920, but they haven't dropped a series in that time and it is a well supported theory in basketball that, any single game they want, they get.

How is it that they thus can guarantee results against opposition that individually is their equal? Mr. Schneek has the answer. Undoubtedly there are things that Mr. Schneek has not but this is hardly one of them. He always has the answer.

It speaks first for organization and team work, then for strategy. In other words, it rains. In this way, he accounts for the fact that the Celtics in seven years have won 741 games and lost 70; that the men have scored an average of 33 points a game, which will win nine games out of ten and, in fact, just about does so.

Celtic Strategy

"Celtic strategy, based upon opponents' mistakes, keeps the team winning," says Mr. Schneek. "The so-called Dehnert play now is used by practically every team but most of them miss the obvious necessity of getting rid of the ball immediately."

"Cleveland developed a mass defense against the play and the Celtics devised what is known as the 'blind' play. On a signal from Holman, Barry and Banks cut down the side of the court. Holman signals the direction and Dehnert throws the ball over his head without looking. If both men are blocked, the ball is shot straight to Holman for a shot from the center of the court. If Holman is blocked, Dehnert feints right or left, turns and takes the shot himself, all within the space of a few seconds.

"The Celtics were the first to develop the five man defense to its full strength and evolved therefrom a switching system that has foiled every team in the country. There never has been a team with the passing that the Celtics exhibit. There never has been a better balanced quintet, with the exception of when Beckman was in his prime and the game that Pete Berry is playing, regardless of the sixteen years he has been with the quintet, has made the loss of Beckman, strange as it may seem, a minor one.

"The success of the Celtics can be traced to one thing, an ability to take a team of stars and submerge their individuality in teamwork and yet leave the opening for the trick shot or play that the individual star always has in his system."

Potato mashers and rolling pins may be passing, but tin can openers are multiplying. — Cincinnati, O., Times Star.

PELTZER, FEARING DEFEAT, MAY NOT COMPETE

GERMAN STAR WANTS TO GET INTO TRAINING

Many Track Aces Are Entered in Millrose Games at New York Thursday Night

NEW YORK, Feb. 2.—(INS)—Despite the fact that the foreign relations committee of the amateur athletic union has granted him sanction to run in the Millrose games here tonight, Dr. Otto Peltzer may not compete because he fears defeat.

The A. A. U. ruled that the star German runner must compete in the half-mile invitation race tonight against such stars as Pinkie Sober, Phil Edwards and Bernard McCafferty, and stated that his wish to run in a special 800-meter event against lesser lights would not be granted. Close Competition

Business reports state that while many industrial corporations have made a lot of money and have increased their dividends during 1927, yet there are many concerns that complain they are not making money. Many say that it is hard to get a new dollar for an old one.

We are passing through a period of great changes in the industrial world. The higher prices paid to labor since the war have opened the eyes of many manufacturers to the necessity of more labor saving machinery. They have bought modern equipment, and fitted up their factories with automatic appliances. Campaigns for more efficient production and elimination of waste have spread over the country.

In former years business firms were ordinarily inclined to work out their own problems without much regard to what anyone else was doing. Today the business men get together and compare notes, study the prevailing methods, hear lectures on modern ways of doing business. The men who participate in such meetings must go home with many new ideas, and there must be a quiet revolution going on in a multitude of factories.

Scientific research plays a far greater part. In former years people guessed at the results they were getting. Nowadays they get the opinion of technically trained people, and come nearer getting perfect results.

Labor policies make a big difference. One concern may make big money because it has known how to promote the enthusiastic co-operation of its work-people, while some competitor may just drag along because it does not secure this co-operation. The business concern that is falling behind has many such questions to consider. It may need to modernize its methods.

Ford's Flivver Airplane

Has the "flivver airplane" come at last?

For a number of years there have been imaginative articles in the magazines and elsewhere predicting that airplanes some day would be as common as automobiles. For a long time people have been wondering if Henry Ford might not try his hand at making a cheap, capable airplane and swamping the country with them.

Now he brings forth a tiny little monoplane—its wingspread is only 20 feet, it will do between 25 and 30 miles to the gallon of gas and it can be sold for around $2300 under present conditions.

Is this the beginning of the era of aerial flivvers that so many of us have been talking about?

Probably it isn't? Or, if it's the beginning, the early stages of development probably will last somewhat longer than they did with the automobile. Ford himself said not long ago that ownership of airplanes by ordinary citizens could not develop as automobile ownership did, for the simple reason that it is much harder and more dangerous to learn to fly than it is to learn to drive a car on a road.

So it looks as if we would have to wait a while yet before jumping into an airplane, for a jaunt to the next state will be as common as getting into the auto to go downtown is now.

And yet—yet you never can tell.

Improvements in safety and reliability features on airplanes are being made with amazing rapidity. Colonel Lindbergh insists that flying is not dangerous. Americans have shown an astonishing aptitude for things mechanical; who can say positively that the average citizen couldn't learn to fly a plane in a short time?

It may come. Ford himself, in spite of his statements, must have a hunch; else why should he be introducing this wee plane?

We hope it does. Already we have perfected an astonishing list of mechanical contrivances to free us from the ordinary bonds of time and space. The flivver airplane would be the final step. It would sever the last ties. With it brought into daily use the American citizen could doff his hat—perhaps he should say his aviator's helmet—to the American eagle on equal terms.

The Dream of Revolution

Leon Trotsky, one of the idols of the Communists of America and Europe, has been exiled to a remote point in Siberia by the Russian soviet government. Before leaving, he predicted that the tides of revolution would yet sweep Europe, and of course he hopes they will sweep America too. But the tides are sweeping far away from the revolution idea.

Some people expect the world to be reformed right off quick. They would level all institutions into ruins, and they feel the world could start new, and build a better state of society.

That plan is like the Chinaman who burned down his house to get rid of the rats. The radicals laugh at the proverb that Rome was not built in a day. However, when they build any state of society that anyone wants to live in, the world will get more interested in their dreams.

They are seeing things across the ocean now by telephone, but that's nothing. We've seen people who, without the assistance of a telephone, were seeing things all the way across the ocean.—Canton, O., Evening Repository.

WINTER DAYS!

KARL writes:
"The winter days
Are cold and bleak,
Sometimes it's
Snow,
Sometimes it's sleet,
We shiver and
The colds we get
Are hard upon
Our weakened self,
Yet when the sun
Shines bright and
Warm,
And wintry winds
Cease with their
Chill,
Scorn not that this
Won't last
And in the sun you
Cannot bask,
For winter weather
Comes and goes
And you can't be
Comfy
In your clothes—
Don't grumble
Just 'cause things
Don't come your way,
Be content with
What you have today;
If life is sweet
And full of
Bliss
You'd never appreciate
The treat
That comes when Things are blue, and
Happiness
Looks down on you—"
KARL—

And what we mean to say
Is,
Ah, Karl, the winter
Days, I find,
Are nearly always
Gay and kind
If you will greet
Them with a
Grin
Forgetting worry and
Life's din;
The day don't matter,
It is you
Who sees a cloudy
Sky—
Or blue!

SYNOPSIS
Fabien, good and handsome youth of France, trains for the priesthood; but meets and loves Manon Lescart, beautiful orphan, whose rascally brother, realizing her worldly value, barter her for gold to Ravoir, rich connoisseur of women. Fabien saves her and carries her off to Paris, where they live happily together. Manon's brother steals her for Ravoir; she escapes, and returns to the deserted lovelast, but Fabien has gone. Homeless, both roam Paris, looking for each other. Manon is seized by a rascally.

Only a thin partition and a few feet of space separated Fabien from Manon and her tormentor. He even heard the man's coarse laugh and a girl's scream. He had never heard Manon scream and she was so terrified that there was no familiar ring in her voice, however; it was a call for help, and Fabien rose to his feet. Dazed from his first bout with brandy, he staggered crazily and the landlord forced him into a seat.

"What you want to butt in for?" he growled.

"A lady in distress—" explained Fabien feebly.

"Lady, my eye—she come in here with him, didn't she?"

Fabien did not know. But on second thought he decided it did not matter. He could see several women, from where he sat, and they were all carousing noisily with their male companions. It seemed to be the usual thing. The spark of chivalry faded from Fabien's eyes.

"I don't care," he said.

When he went out into the early morning he found his pockets were empty. But he was saved the anguish of knowing that Manon had been very near to him during the night and was by now, very much against her will, established as the Come De Ravoir's pampered mistress.

CHAPTER XI

Days and days of weary searching brought no trace of Manon.

It was impossible for Fabien to concentrate on anything until she had been found. He could not return to his father and hear Manon slandered, and he was in no mood to resume his studies. Love had so enguiled his mind and heart that he had surrendered himself to its resulting misery and declined every avenue of escape.

Tiberge was his one friend and support, without whose many voluntary loans Fabien would have starved. His courage was kept up only by the belief that Manon was true and trying as hard to find him as he was to locate her.

The passing weeks brought a change in his former neat appearance. His clothes grew shabby and he did not care. He knew that as soon as he found Manon his interest and ambition would be rekindled and he would enjoy the best life of fered.

Tiberge never mentioned the call he made on Manon, yet he sensed that in some way it influenced her departure and as time passed and he saw how deeply and seriously Fabien was affected, he regretted the part he had played—not in their separation for he felt that was right—but in his friend's sorrow and broken spirit. He had never realized that love could work such havoc with a man's life.

A desire to justify his own stand, and perhaps bring Fabien to his senses, made Tiberge begin a personal search for Manon.

He was successful in locating her. Discovering the kind of life she was leading gave him complete vindication in the matter. He was right about her being the wrong type of woman for Fabien. Tiberge hurried to relate the news because he was sure that Fabien's interest and anguish would cease when he knew the truth, then he would be willing to return to his father and his calling.

They were walking along the Boulevard together when Tiberge said, "Heartache is a bitter thing to endure alone. We who love you have a right to share it—come back!"

"I shall never leave Paris until I have found Manon," replied Fabien tonelessly.

Now was Tiberge's chance. "But Manon is lost to you. She has placed herself under the protection of the Comte De Ravoir." He carefully studied Fabien's face and felt sorry for him.

"Damn you! Do you think I believe that lie?" Fabien's eyes blazed and his fists were clenched. "My friend—it is the truth! I want only to help you." Tiberge spoke soothingly but it was useless.

Fabien quickened his stride and left Tiberge behind as though he no longer desired his society. However, he had not gone more than a few paces when he stopped dead in his tracks and peered tragically into a carriage that was passing by.

It was a beautiful and expensive carriage, but he did not notice that. Neither was he conscious that his gaiters and clothes were being spattered with mud from the wheels. All he saw was—Manon! His beautiful Manon! Still beautiful—more lovely than when he last saw her—but no longer his! This was too evident from her luxurious attire and magnificent jewels.

By this time Manon's strength was gone.

bien's eyes and he reached for another drink! "God, I wish I could find Manon!" His head went down the part he had played—not in their separation for he felt that was right—but in his friend's sorrow and broken spirit. He had never realized that love could work such havoc with a man's life.

Manon's efforts to free herself were futile and brought forth shouts of enjoyment from the big bully. His women were always willing, for his carresses, to the point of annoyance. This was the first time he had had to argue with one and the conquest was promising.

"Come on, beauty, it's time for a kiss," he whispered hoarsely with his mouth very near to Manon's lips.

With all her might she pushed at his face with both hands and screamed. But this did not prevent two strong arms from circling her waist and drawing her close.

By this time Manon's strength was gone and sobs of fright and hysteria shook her whole body.

Up in the attic room when Lescart had promised to keep an eye on his rebellious sister he was not making an idle threat. She was too valuable to become lost or stolen again. Thus it was that, unknown to Manon, Lescart lurked in the shadows when she started out alone from the pension and he followed at a safe distance. He wanted her to get a taste of being alone on the streets of Paris.

According to his idea it would be the best thing in the world to put her in the proper state of receptiveness to his plans. But Lescart had no idea of permitting Manon to become soiled by her contact with sordid reality—the Comte preferred her as she was, not as she might become if left on the loose without funds and a protector.

Lescart saw Manon carried into the cafe, but he waited just long enough for her to appreciate his interference before making an appearance.

His entrance was most timely. Manon's strength had given way and the bully's loose lips were within an inch of her own when Lescart roughly took him by the arm and spun him around. Surprised at this interference the man cursed loudly and made known his willingness to fight it out.

School Children Pick Aviation As Goal For Future Work In Life

LINCOLN, Neb., Feb. 2.—(INS)—Policemen and railroad engineers are apparently losing their glamour in the eyes of modern youth. Out of more than 40,000 Nebraska school children questioned, less than two hundred named these two professions as the goal of their ambitions.

The tabulations showed that approximately eight per cent of the children questioned are looking forward to spending their lives on the farm. Aviation holds a high rank among the popular professions, the Nebraska survey shows and Col. Lindbergh is given much credit for this by C. A. Palmer, state director of vocational education.

Four girls stated their life's goal is to be president of the United States.

APPARENTLY SAFEL OUT OF REACH

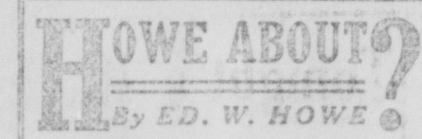

The Epic of the Air "WE" By Charles A. Lindbergh

CHAPTER XXII.

"I was at that time only 1,500 feet high, and as the engine did not pick up as soon as I expected I shoved the flashlight in my belt and was about to release the parachute flare and jump when the engine finally took hold again. A second trial showed the main tank to be dry, and accordingly a maximum of twenty minutes' flying time left.

"There were no openings in the fog and I decided to leave the ship as soon as the reserve tank was exhausted. I tried to get the mail pit open with the idea of throwing out the mail sacks and then jumping, but was unable to open the front buckle. I knew

© Bell Syndicate, Inc. WND Service

John Quincy Adams said: "With most men reform is a trade—with some a swindling trade—with others an honest yet a lucrative trade. Reform for its own sake seldom thrives." A clever paragraph, yet it isn't true. Millions of men and women advocate reforms of various kinds—consistently, intelligently, honestly, and without hope of reward, for the good of their children, their friends and neighbors. All reforms are forwarded and finally established by the efforts of the silent majority. The efforts of those who make reform a trade are not very effective; we are suspicious of the professional good man, but all respect and heed those among our neighbors who believe in a better world because of the knowledge, born of experience, that a better world will prove more profitable and comfortable for everybody.

It is generally said there was never before such shiftlessness as exists today. Millions of men are recklessly squandering money which will later need a few miserable pennies to provide necessities. Statistics proved a quarter of a century ago, that 90 per cent of men are very poor after reaching sixty-five, and become charges on public charity or grumbling relatives. If the general shiftlessness is greater, now than then, and increasing, will it be possible to provide a sufficient number of almshouses in the immediate future?

I despise any woman at all like Madame de Stael. You will recall she had a salon, where the men gathered to listen to her brilliant conversation; she displayed womanly charms as a cunning (public) speaker displays oratory about fictitious things he has polished with great practice and care. I admire Napoleon largely because he understood Madame de Stael, and ordered her out of Paris. I admire only womanly women. The natural charms of women are enough; when they are greatly polished, they lose their attractiveness for me.

The great writing men seem to have a notion that they have a special mission to point out the shame of the world. We common people know it as well as the critics do, and are doing more to get rid of it.

I have been expecting that a lawyer, having a client who robbed a bank, contended in court that the law punishing bank robbers is unconstitutional.

that the risk of fire with no gasoline in the tanks was very slight and began to climb for altitude when I saw a light on the ground for several seconds.

"This was the first light I had seen for nearly two hours; and as almost enough gasoline for fifteen minutes' flying remained in the reserve, I glided down to 1,200 feet and pulled out the flare release cable as nearly as I could lighted over the spot where the light had appeared. This time the flare functioned but only to illuminate the top of a solid bank of fog, into which it soon disappeared without showing any trace of the ground.

"Seven minutes' gasoline remained in the gravity tank. Seeing the glow of a town through the fog I turned towards open country and nosed the plane up. At 5,000 feet the engine sputtered and died.

"I stepped up on the cowl and out over the right side of the cockpit, pulling the rip cord after about a 100-foot fall. The parachute, an Irving seat service type functioned perfectly; I was falling head downward when the risers jerked me into an upright position and the chute opened.

"This time I saved the rip cord. I pulled the flashlight from my belt and was playing it down toward the top of the fog when I heard the plane's engine pick up. When I jumped it had practically stopped dead and I had neglected to cut the switches. Apparently when the ship nosed down an additional supply of gasoline drained to carburetor. Soon she came into sight about a quarter mile away and headed in the general direction of my parachute.

"I put the flashlight in a pocket of my suit preparatory to slipping the parachute out of the way if necessary. The plane was making a left spiral of about a mile diameter, and passed approximately 360 yards away from my chute, leaving me on the outside of the circle. I was undecided as to whether the plane or I was descending the more rapidly and glided my chute away from the spiral path of the ship as rapidly as I could.

"The ship passed completely out of sight, but reappeared in a few seconds, its rate of descent being about the same as that of the parachute. I counted the five spirals, each one a little further away than the last, before reaching the top of the fog bank.

"When I settled into the fog I knew that the ground was within 1,000 feet and reached for the flashlight, but found it to be missing. I could see neither earth nor stars and had no idea what kind of territory was below. I crossed my legs to keep from straddling a branch or wire, guarded my face with my hands and waited.

"Presently I saw the outline of the ground and a moment later was down in a cornfield. The corn was over my head and the chute was lying on top of the corn stalks. I hurriedly packed it and started down a corn row. The ground visibility was about 100 yards. In a few minutes I came to a stubble field and some wagon tracks which I followed to a farmyard a quarter mile away. After reaching the farmyard I noticed auto headlights playing over the roadside. Thinking that someone might have located the wreck of the plane I walked over to the car.

"The occupants asked whether I had heard an airplane crash and it required some time to explain to them that I had been piloting the plane, and yet was searching for it myself. I had to display the parachute as evidence before they were thoroughly convinced. The farmer was sure, as were most others in a three-mile radius, that the ship had just missed his house and crashed nearby.

"In fact, he could locate within a few rods the spot where he heard it hit the ground, and we spent an unsuccessful quarter hour hunting for the wreck in that vicinity before going to the farmhouse to arrange for a searching party and telephone St. Louis and Chicago.

"I had just put in the long distance calls when the phone rang and we were notified that the plane had been found in a cornfield over two miles away. It took several minutes to reach the site of the crash, due to the necessity of slow driving through the fog, and a small crowd had already assembled when we arrived.

"The plane was wound up in a ball-shaped mass. It had narrowly missed one farmhouse and had hooked its left wing in a grain shock a quarter mile beyond. The ship had landed on the left wing and wheel and skidded along the ground for 80 yards, going through one fence before coming to rest in the edge of a cornfield about 100 yards short of a barn.

"The mail pit was laid open and one sack of mail was on the ground. The mail, however, was uninjured.

REMUS STARTS COURT BATTLE FOR FREEDOM

Attorneys For Former Bootleg King Seek His Release From Lima Asylum

LIMA, O., Feb. 2—(UP)—The long delayed fight of George Remus, former millionaire Cincinnati rum-runner, to obtain his release from the state hospital for the criminally insane here, has been launched.

Attorneys for the former bootleg king, who was committed to the asylum after his acquittal of the murder of his wife, Imogene, have filed a petition for a writ of habeas corpus returnable at 2 p. m. tomorrow.

The proceedings will be heard by Judge Judges Phil M. Crow, Kent W. Hughes and Charles L. Justice and will claim Remus has never been found insane. The petition also sets forth that two of the three alienists who examined Remus did not sign the order of the Cincinnati probate court, sending him to Lima.

State's Attorney General Edward C. Turner has appointed E. M. Botkin, prosecutor of Allen county, to represent the state and has suggested to Prosecutor Charles P. Taft II. of Cincinnati, who sought to convict Remus for the killing of his wife, that Taft either attend or be represented at the hearing.

Botkin intimated that tomorrow's proceedings will consist merely of the setting of a future date for a hearing.

Close Competition

Business reports state that while many industrial corporations have made a lot of money and have increased their dividends during 1927, yet there are many concerns that complain they are not making money. Many say that it is hard to get a new dollar for an old one.

We are passing through a period of great changes in the industrial world. The higher prices paid to labor since the war have opened the eyes of many manufacturers to the necessity of more labor saving machinery. They have bought modern equipment, and fitted up their factories with automatic appliances. Campaigns for more efficient production and elimination of waste have spread over the country.

In former years business firms were ordinarily inclined to work out their own problems without much regard to what anyone else was doing. Today the business men get together and compare notes, study the prevailing methods, hear lectures on modern ways of doing business. The men who participate in such meetings must go home with many new ideas, and there must be a quiet revolution going on in a multitude of factories.

Scientific research plays a far greater part. In former years people guessed at the results they were getting. Nowadays they get the opinion of technically trained people, and come nearer getting perfect results.

Labor policies make a big difference. One concern may make big money because it has known how to promote the enthusiastic co-operation of its work-people, while some competitor may just drag along because it does not secure this co-operation. The business concern that is falling behind has many such questions to consider. It may need to modernize its methods.

Ford's Flivver Airplane

Has the "flivver airplane" come at last?

For a number of years there have been imaginative articles in the magazines and elsewhere predicting that airplanes some day would be as common as automobiles. For a long time people have been wondering if Henry Ford might not try his hand at making a cheap, capable airplane and swamping the country with them.

Now he brings forth a tiny little monoplane—its wingspread is only 20 feet, it will do between 25 and 30 miles to the gallon of gas and it can be sold for around $2300 under present conditions.

Is this the beginning of the era of aerial flivvers that so many of us have been talking about?

Probably it isn't? Or, if it's the beginning, the early stages of development probably will last somewhat longer than they did with the automobile. Ford himself said not long ago that ownership of airplanes by ordinary citizens could not develop as automobile ownership did, for the simple reason that it is much harder and more dangerous to learn to fly than it is to learn to drive a car on a road.

So it looks as if we would have to wait a while yet before jumping into an airplane, for a jaunt to the next state will be as common as getting into the auto to go downtown is now.

And yet—you never can tell.

Improvements in safety and reliability features on airplanes are being made with amazing rapidity. Colonel Lindbergh insists that flying is not dangerous. Americans have shown an astonishing aptitude for things mechanical; who can say positively that the average citizen couldn't learn to fly a plane in a short time?

It may come. Ford himself, in spite of his statements, must have a hunch; else why should he be introducing this wee plane?

We hope it does. Already we have perfected an astonishing list of mechanical contrivances to free us from the ordinary bonds of time and space. The flivver airplane would be the final step. It would sever the last ties. With it brought into daily use the American citizen could doff his hat—perhaps we should say his aviator's helmet—to the American eagle on equal terms.

The Dream of Revolution

Leon Trotsky, one of the idols of the Communists of America and Europe, has been exiled to a remote point in Siberia by the Russian soviet government. Before leaving, he predicted that the tides of revolution would sweep Europe, and of course he hopes they will sweep America too. But the tides are sweeping far away from the revolution idea.

Some people expect the world to be reformed right off quick. They would level all institutions into ruins, and they feel the world could start new, and build a better state of society.

That plan is like the Chinaman who burned down his house to get rid of the rats. The radicals laugh at the proverb that Rome was not built in a day. However, when they build any state of society that anyone wants to live in, the world will get more interested in their dreams.

They are seeing things across the ocean now by telephone, but that's nothing. We've seen people who, without the assistance of a telephone, were seeing things all the way across the ocean.—Canton, O., Evening Repository.

WINTER DAYS!

KARL writes:
"The winter days
Are cold and bleak,
Sometimes it's
Snow,
Sometimes it's sleet,
We shiver and
The colds we get
Are hard upon
Our weakened self,
Yet when the sun
Shines bright and
Warm,
And wintry winds
Cease with their
Chill,
Scorn not that this
Won't last
And in the sun you
Cannot bask,
For winter weather
Comes and goes
And you can't be
Comfy
In your clothes—
Don't grumble
Just 'cause things
Don't come your way,
Be content with
What you have today;
If life is sweet
And full of
Bliss
You'd never appreciate
The treat
That comes when
Things are blue, and
Happiness
Looks down on you—"
KARL—

And what we mean to say
Is,
Ah, Karl, the winter
Days, I find,
Are nearly always
Gay and kind
If you will greet
Them with a
Grin
Forgetting worry and
Life's din;
The day don't matter,
It is you
Who sees a cloudy
Sky—
Or blue!

When a Man Loves

By ALLIE LOWE MILES

Copyright 1927, Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc.
John Barrymore in "WHEN A MAN LOVES" is a Warner Bros. Picture.

SYNOPSIS

Fabien, good and handsome youth of France, trains for the priesthood; but meets and loves Manon Lescaut, beautiful orphan, whose worldly father, realizing her worldly value, battles her for gold to Raviro, rich connoisseur of women. Fabien saves her and carries her off to Paris, where they live happily together. Manon's brother steals her for Raviro; she escapes, and returns to the deserted lovelorn, but Fabien has gone. Homeless, both roam Paris, looking for each other. Manon is seized by a roudy.

Only a thin partition and a few feet of space separated Fabien from Manon and her tormentor. He even heard the man's coarse laugh and a girl's scream. He had never heard Manon scream and she was so terrified that there was no familiar ring in her voice, however; it was a call for help, and Fabien rose to his feet. Dazed from his first bout with brandy, he staggered crazily and the landlord forced him into a seat.

"What you want to butt in for?" he growled.

"A lady in distress—" explained Fabien feebly.

"Lady, my eye—she come in here with him, didn't she?"

Fabien did not know. But on second thought he decided it did not matter. He could see several women, from where he sat, and they were all carousing noisily with their male companions. It seemed to be the usual thing. The spark of chivalry faded from Fabien.

By this time Manon's strength was gone.

bien's eyes and he reached for another drink. "I wish I could find Manon!" His head went down on his arms and he cried, real tears from exhaustion and worry.

Manon's efforts to free herself were futile and brought forth shouts of enjoyment from the big bully. His women were always willing for his caresses, to the point of annoyance. This was the first time he had had to argue with one and the conquest was promising.

"Come on, beauty, it's time for a kiss," he whispered hoarsely with his mouth very near to Manon's lips.

With all her might she pushed at his face with both hands and screamed. But this did not prevent two strong arms from circling her waist and drawing her close.

By this time Manon's strength was gone and sobs of fright and hysteria shook her whole body.

Up in the attic room when Lescaut had promised to keep an eye on his rebellious sister he was not making an idle threat. She was too valuable to become lost or stolen again. Thus it was that, unknown to Manon, Lescaut lurked in the shadows when she started out alone from the pension and he followed at a safe distance. He wanted her to get a taste of being alone on the streets of Paris. According to his idea it would be the best thing in the world to put her in the proper state of receptiveness to his plans. But Lescaut had no idea of permitting Manon to become soiled by her contact with sordid reality—the Comte preferred her as she was, not as she might become if left on the loose without funds and a protector.

Lescaut saw Manon carried into the cafe, but he waited just long enough for her to appreciate his interference before making an appearance.

His entrance was most timely. Manon's strength had given way and the bully's loose lips were within an inch of her own when Lescaut roughly took him by the arm and spun him around. Surprised at this interference the man cursed loudly and made known his willingness to fight it out.

A purse of jingling gold Louis was forced into his fist as Lescaut explained, "I would appreciate your generosity in giving her up. She happens to be my elster and I must take her home."

Stilled by the gold and its promised pleasures the man relinquished his tempting prey.

Almost dead from fright, Manon clung to Lescaut for protection and support. It seemed that the experiences of the last few hours must have been a nightmare and, although Manon knew they were not, she could hardly wait to get out of that horrible cafe.

Realizing that she no longer made any resistance about going with him, Lescaut led her triumphantly through the center room toward the outside door.

They passed a man with his head buried on outstretched arms, but they did not look in his direction. If they had, Manon would have recognized Fabien. No explanations would have been necessary and she would have remained with him, even in that terrible place, rather than accompany Lescaut to the Comte's gorgeous mansion.

It seems strange and wrong that when two people loved as truly as Fabien and Manon that their lives should be wrecked and miserable as a result of their passion.

Fabien stayed at the lonely table until his dazed condition had been absorbed in sleep.

When he went out into the early morning his pockets were empty. But he was saved the anguish of knowing that Manon had been very near to him during the night and was by now, very much against her will, established as the Comte de Raviro's pampered mistress.

CHAPTER XI

Days and days of weary searching brought no trace of Manon.

It was impossible for Fabien to concentrate on anything until she had been found. He could not return to his father and hear Manon slandered, and he was in no mood to resume his studies. Love had so engulfed his mind and heart that he had surrendered himself to its resulting misery and declined every avenue of escape.

Tiberge was his one friend and support without whose many voluntary loans Fabien would have starved. His courage was kept up only by the belief that Manon was true and trying as hard to find him as he was to locate her.

The passing weeks brought a change in his former neat appearance. His clothes grew shabby and he did not care. He knew that as soon as he found Manon his interest and ambition would be refired and he would enjoy the best life of fered.

Tiberge never mentioned the call he made on Manon, yet he sensed that in some way it influenced her departure and as time passed and Fabien was affected, he regretted the part he had played—not in their separation for he felt that was right—but in his friend's sorrow and broken spirit. He had never realized that love could work such havoc with a man's life.

A desire to justify his own stand, and perhaps being Fabien to his senses, made Tiberge begin a personal search for Manon.

He was successful in locating her. Discovering the kind of life she was leading gave him complete vindication in the matter. He was right about her being the wrong type of woman for Fabien. Tiberge hurried to relay the news because he saw how deeply and seriously and anguish would cease when he knew the truth, then he would be willing to return to his father and his calling.

They were walking along the Boulevard together when Tiberge said, "Heartache is a bitter thing to endure alone. We who love you have a right to share it—come back!"

"I shall never leave Paris until I have found Manon," replied Fabien tonelessly.

Now was Tiberge's chance. "But Manon is lost to you. She has placed herself under the protection of the Comte de Raviro." He carefully studied Fabien's face and felt sorry for him.

"Damn you! Do you think I believe that lie?" Fabien's eyes blazed and his fists were clenched. "My friend—it is the truth! I want only to help you." Tiberge spoke soothingly but it was useless.

Fabien quickened his stride and left Tiberge behind as though he no longer desired his society. However, he had not gone more than a few paces when he stopped dead in his tracks and peered tragically into a carriage that was passing by.

It was a beautiful and expensive carriage, but he did not notice that. Neither was he conscious that his gaiters and clothes were being splattered with mud from the wheels. All he saw was—Manon! His beautiful Manon! Still beautiful—more lovely than when he last saw her—but no longer his! This was too evident from her luxurious attire and magnificent jewels.

School Children Pick Aviation As Goal For Future Work In Life

LINCOLN, Neb., Feb. 2.—(INS)—Police and railroad engineers are apparently losing their glamour in the eyes of modern youth. Out of more than 40,000 Nebraska school children questioned, less than two hundred named these two professions as the goal of their ambitions.

The tabulations showed that approximately eight per cent of the children questioned are looking forward to spending their lives on the farm. Aviation holds a high rank among the popular professions, the Nebraska survey shows and Col. Lindbergh is given much credit for this by C. A. Fulmer, state director of vocational education.

Four girls stated their life's goal is to be president of the United States.

APPARENTLY SAFEL OUT OF REACH

The Epic of the Air "WE" By Charles A. Lindbergh

CHAPTER XXII.

"I was at that time only 1,500 feet high, and as the engine did not pick up as soon as I expected I shoved the flashlight in my belt and was about to release the parachute flare and jump when the engine finally took hold again. A second trial shoved the main tank to be dry, and accordingly a maximum of twenty minutes' flying time left."

"There were no openings in the fog and I decided to leave the ship as soon as the reserve tank was exhausted. I tried to get the mail pit open with the idea of throwing out the mail sacks and then jumping, but was unable to open the front buckle. I knew

HOWE ABOUT?

John Quincy Adams said: "With most men reform is a trade—with some a swindling trade—with others an honest yet a lucrative trade. Reform for its own sake seldom thrives." A clever paragraph, yet it isn't true. Millions of men and women advocate reforms of various kinds consistently, intelligently, honestly, and without hope of reward, for the good of their children, their friends and neighbors. All reforms are forwarded and finally established by the efforts of the silent majority. The efforts of those who make reform a trade are not very effective; we are suspicious of the professional goodman, but all respect and heed those among our neighbors who believe in a better world because of the knowledge, born of experience, that a better world will prove more profitable and comfortable for everybody.

It is generally said there was never before such shiftlessness exists today. Millions of men are recklessly squandering money, who will later need a few miserable pennies to provide necessities. Statistics proved, a quarter of a century ago, that 80 per cent of men were very poor after reaching sixty-five, and become charges on public charity or grumbling relatives. If the general shiftlessness is greater now than then, and increasing, will it be possible to provide a sufficient number of almshouses in the immediate future?

I despise any woman at all like Madame de Staël. You will recall she had a salon where the men gathered to listen to her brilliant conversation; she displayed womanly charms as a cunning public speaker displays oratory about fictitious things he has polished with great practice and care. I admire Napoleon largely because he understood Madame de Staël, and ordered her out of Paris. I admire only womanly women. The natural charms of women are enough; when they are greatly polished, they lose their attractiveness for me.

The great writing men seem to have a notion that they have a special mission to point out the shame of the world. We common people know it as well as the critics do, and are doing more to get rid of it.

I have been expecting this: A lawyer, having a client who robbed a bank, contended in court that the law punishing bank robbers is unconstitutional.

that the risk of fire with no gasoline in the tanks was very slight and began to climb for altitude when I saw a light on the ground for several seconds.

"This was the first light I had seen for nearly two hours; and as almost enough gasoline for fifteen minutes' flying remained in the reserve, I glided down to 1,200 feet and pulled out the flare release cable as nearly as I could judge over the spot where the light had appeared. This time the flare functioned but only to illuminate the top of a solid bank of fog, into which it soon disappeared without showing any trace of the ground.

"Seven minutes' gasoline remained in the gravity tank. Seeing the glow of a town through the fog I turned towards open country and nosed the plane up. At 5,000 feet the engine sputtered and died.

"I stepped up on the cowling and out over the right side of the cockpit, pulling the rip cord after about a 100-foot fall. The parachute, an Irving seat service type functioned perfectly; I was falling head downward when the risers jerked me into an upright position and the chute opened.

"This time I saved the rip cord. I pulled the flashlight from my belt and was playing it down toward the top of the fog when I heard the plane's engine pick up. When I jumped it had practically stopped dead and I had neglected to cut the switches. Apparently when the ship nosed down an additional supply of gasoline drained to carburetor. Soon she came into sight about a quarter mile away and headed in the general direction of my parachute.

"I put the flashlight in a pocket of my suit preparatory to slipping the parachute out of the way if necessary. The plane was making a left spiral of about a mile diameter, and passed approximately 300 yards away from my chute, leaving me on the outside of the circle. I was undecided as to whether the plane or I was descending the more rapidly and glided my chute away from the spiral path of the ship as rapidly as I could.

"The ship passed completely out of sight, but reappeared in a few seconds, its rate of descent being about the same as that of the parachute. I counted the five spirals, each one a little further away than the last, before reaching the top of the fog bank.

"When I settled into the fog I knew that the ground was within 1,000 feet and reached for the flashlight, but found it to be missing. I could see neither earth nor stars and had no idea what kind of territory was below. I crossed my legs to keep from straddling a branch or wire, guarded my face with my hands and waited.

"Presently I saw the outline of the ground and a moment later was down in a cornfield. The corn was over my head and the chute was lying on top of the corn stalks. I hurriedly packed it and started down a corn row. The ground visibility was about 100 yards. In a few minutes I came to a stubble field and some wagon tracks which I followed to a farmyard a quarter mile away. After reaching the farmyard I noticed auto headlights playing over the roadside. Thinking that someone might have located the wreck of the plane I walked over to the car.

"The occupants asked whether I had heard an airplane crash and it required some time to explain to them that I had been piloting the plane, and yet was searching for it myself. I had to display the parachute as evidence before they were thoroughly convinced. The farmer was sure, as were most others in a three-mile radius, that the ship had just missed his house and crashed nearby.

"In fact, he could locate within a few rods the spot where he heard it hit the ground, and we spent an unsuccessful quarter hour hunting for the wreck in that vicinity before going to the farmhouse to arrange for a searching party and telephone St. Louis and Chicago.

"I had just put in the long distance calls when the phone rang and we were notified that the plane had been found in a cornfield over two miles away. It took several minutes to reach the site of the crash, due to the necessity of slow driving through the fog, and a small crowd had already assembled when we arrived.

"The plane was wound up in a ball-shaped mass. It had narrowly missed one farmhouse and had hooked its left wing in a grain shock a quarter mile beyond. The ship had landed on the left wing and wheel and skidded along the ground for 30 yards, going through one fence before coming to rest in the edge of a cornfield about 100 yards short of a barn.

"The mail pit was laid open and one sack of mail was on the ground. The mail, however, was unharmed.

Women's Clubs Federation Stages Campaign For More Adequately Equipped Homes

Three leaders in the adequately equipped homes campaign of the Ohio Federation of Women's Clubs are pictured here. Dr. Josephine L. Peirce of Lima, state president of the federation, is both a homemaker and a health advocate. Mrs. Depeu Head, chairman of the federation's educational committee, not only conducts her own household work in Columbus but also finds time to do a great amount of welfare work for women. She heads the school essay contest which the federation is staging as part of the campaign.

Mrs. F. G. Cromer of Dayton is chairman of the federation's American home department and as such is especially active in the campaign.

In its efforts for more adequate household equipment the federation was actuated by a survey which showed that hundreds of Ohio homes lack even the most elementary conveniences, which gas, electricity and water have made possible.

Home Mission Money Chiefly For Whites

CLEVELAND, O., Feb. 2.—(U P)—More than 200 out of the 305 local churches in the United States receiving aid from one of the major denominations are in localities that have at least one other Protestant church, according to C. Luther Fry of the New York Institute of Social and Religious research.

The major portion of the funds spent for home mission work, which with some denominations

approximate 90 per cent, goes to native white churches, Fry declared.

The balance of from 10 to 25 per cent is spent for the upkeep and monetary losses of negro, Indian or foreign churches, he said. Five denominations, it was estimated, distributed $5,000,000 a year in home mission work.

"Two years ago the Logan Gas company promised the councils of these 38 communities that, if the company contracted a less rate with any other city they would, likewise, give such cities the benefit of such rate agreements.

"I challenge The Logan Gas company to make good its promises.

"The answer of the gas company will be that the promise, which was made two years ago, was made by the Logan Gas company and that, since its properties now is owned by The Columbia Gas and Electric corporation, such a promise is not binding," Mouser declared.

CATTLE IN OHIO ARE ON INCREASE

COLUMBUS, O., Feb. 2.—(INS) —Though the number of cattle in the United States has decreased during the past year, Ohio now has more cattle than it did a year ago, figures compiled by the United States department of agriculture showed today.

There are at present 917,000 milk cows and heifers in Ohio, 2,537,000 swine, 2,400,000 sheep, 542,000 horses and colts and 33,000 mules.

The market price on these animals has not changed to a great extent. The value of Ohio swine has dropped, but the price of sheep per head has raised. Mules are worth nine more dollars per head than they were a year ago, the figures show. Horses and colts are also worth more now than last year, it is said.

Attorneys For Former Bootleg King Seek His Release From Lima Asylum

LIMA, O., Feb. 2—(UP)—The long delayed fight of George Remus, former millionaire Cincinnati rum-runner, to obtain his release from the state hospital for the criminally insane here, has been launched.

Attorneys for the former bootleg king, who was committed to the asylum after his acquittal of the murder of his wife, Imogene, have filed a petition for a writ of habeas corpus returnable at 2 p. m. tomorrow.

The proceedings will be heard by Judge Judges Phil M. Crow, Kent W. Hughes and Charles L. Justice and will claim Remus has never been found insane. The petition also sets forth that two of the three alienists who examined Remus did not sign the order of the Cincinnati probate court, sending him to Lima.

State's Attorney General Edward C. Turner has appointed E. M. Botkin, prosecutor of Allen county, to represent the state and has suggested to Prosecutor Charles P. Taft II. of Cincinnati, who sought to convict Remus for the killing of his wife, that Taft either attend or be represented at the hearing.

Botkin intimated that tomorrow's proceedings will consist merely of the setting of a future date for a hearing.

Women's Clubs Federation Stages Campaign For More Adequately Equipped Homes

MRS. DEPEU HEAD

MRS. F. G. CROMER

Three leaders in the adequately equipped homes campaign of the Ohio Federation of Women's Clubs are pictured here. Dr. Josephine L. Peirce of Lima, state president of the federation, is both a homemaker and a health advocate. Mrs. Depeu Head, chairman of the federation's educational committee, not only conducts her own household work in Columbus but also finds time to do a great amount of welfare work for women. She heads the school essay contest which the federation is staging as part of the campaign.

Mrs. F. G. Cromer of Dayton is chairman of the federation's American home department and as such is especially active in the campaign.

In its efforts for more adequate household equipment the federation was actuated by a survey which showed that hundreds of Ohio homes lack even the most elementary conveniences, which gas, electricity and water have made possible.

Home Mission Money Chiefly For Whites

CLEVELAND, O., Feb. 2.—(U P)—More than 200 out of the 305 local churches in the United States receiving aid from one of the major denominations are in localities that have at least one other Protestant church, according to C. Luther Fry of the New York Institute of Social and Religious research.

The major portion of the funds spent for home mission work, which with some denominations

approximate 90 per cent, goes to native white churches, Fry declared.

The balance of from 10 to 25 per cent is spent for the upkeep and monetary losses of negro, Indian or foreign churches, he said. Five denominations, it was estimated, distributed $5,000,000 a year in home mission work.

"I challenge The Logan Gas company to make good its promises.

CATTLE IN OHIO ARE ON INCREASE

COLUMBUS, O., Feb. 2.—(INS) —Though the number of cattle in the United States has decreased during the past year, Ohio now has more cattle than it did a year ago, figures compiled by the United States department of agriculture showed today.

There are at present 917,000 milk cows and heifers in Ohio, 2,537,000 swine, 2,400,000 sheep, 542,000 horses and colts and 33,000 mules.

The market price on these animals has not changed to a great extent. The value of Ohio swine has dropped, but the price of sheep per head has raised. Mules are worth nine more dollars per head than they were a year ago, the figures show. Horses and colts are also worth more now than last year, it is said.
